

Feedback

I presented my seven storyboard ideas to my breakout room group. I explained the plan (setting, players, activity, and goals) for each storyboard and showed my 4-frame sketches.

Feedback I received:

They liked that the interactions were very clear and easy to understand - like a storybook.

They suggested keeping the light colour consistent across frames to avoid confusion (e.g., yellow = warming, green = good, red = bad).

They mentioned that for the sunrise alarm, the gradual brightness idea was intuitive and could work well in real life e.g. at hotels or luxury apartments.

What I improved:

I made sure the light colours in all storyboards were consistent and clearly indicated the right status.

I simplified my sketches to make them easier to follow (fewer background details).

I made the captions shorter and more direct so they fit neatly under each frame.